Gafundi is a small red bird.

She has many siblings. They like to fly together and they share everything.

Gafundi is always curious. Sometimes she flies very far away.

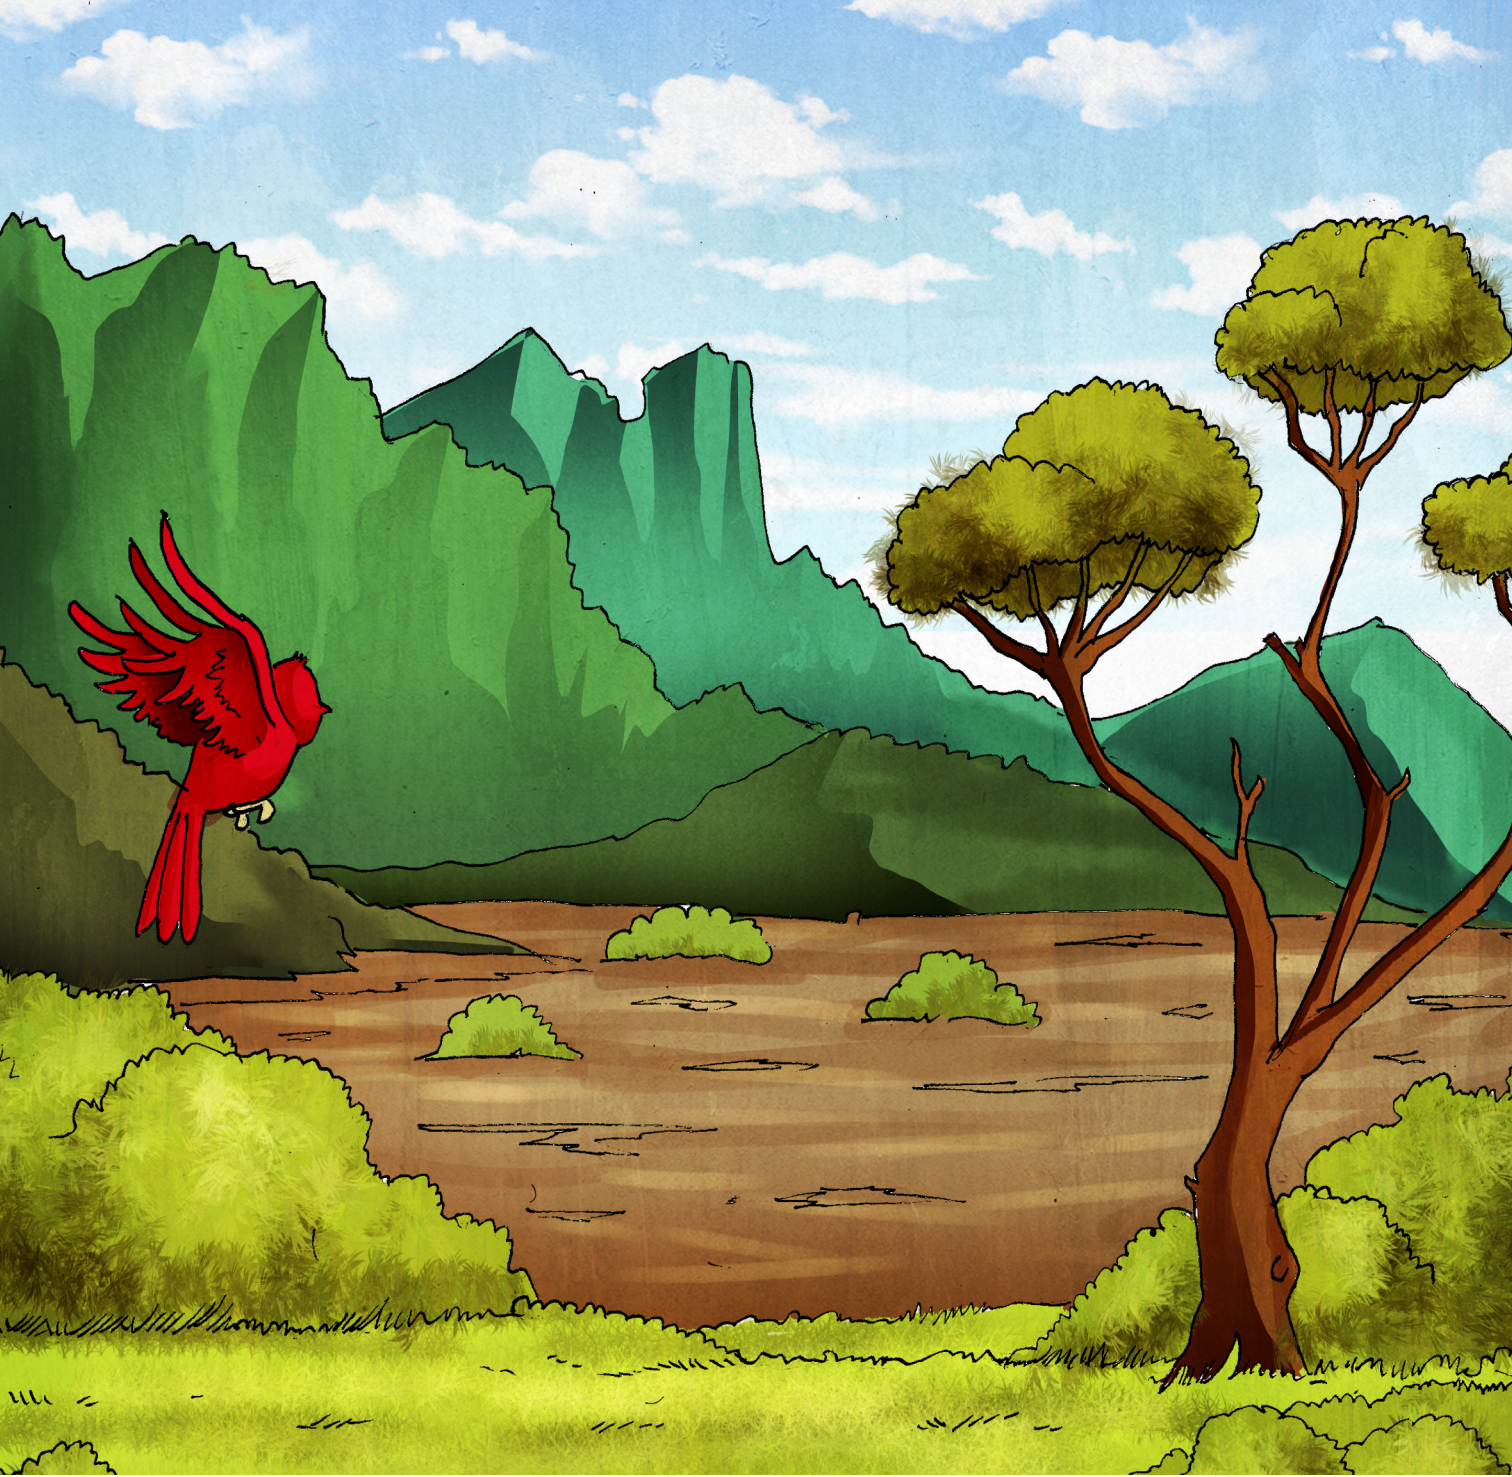

She likes visiting many kinds of flowers in the forest.
Those flowers smell good and they attract butterflies.

She enjoys seeing animals gathered together.
Whether they fly like herself or eat grass.

It amuses her to see different kinds of water animals.
Sometimes she even sees carnivorous animals.

When she sees them, she finds them beautiful. One day she flew until she got tired and said to herself, “I need to rest.”

“Let me stop on this big rock,” she said. As soon as she stepped on it, it started moving.

She got scared and when she took a closer look at the rock, it had legs.

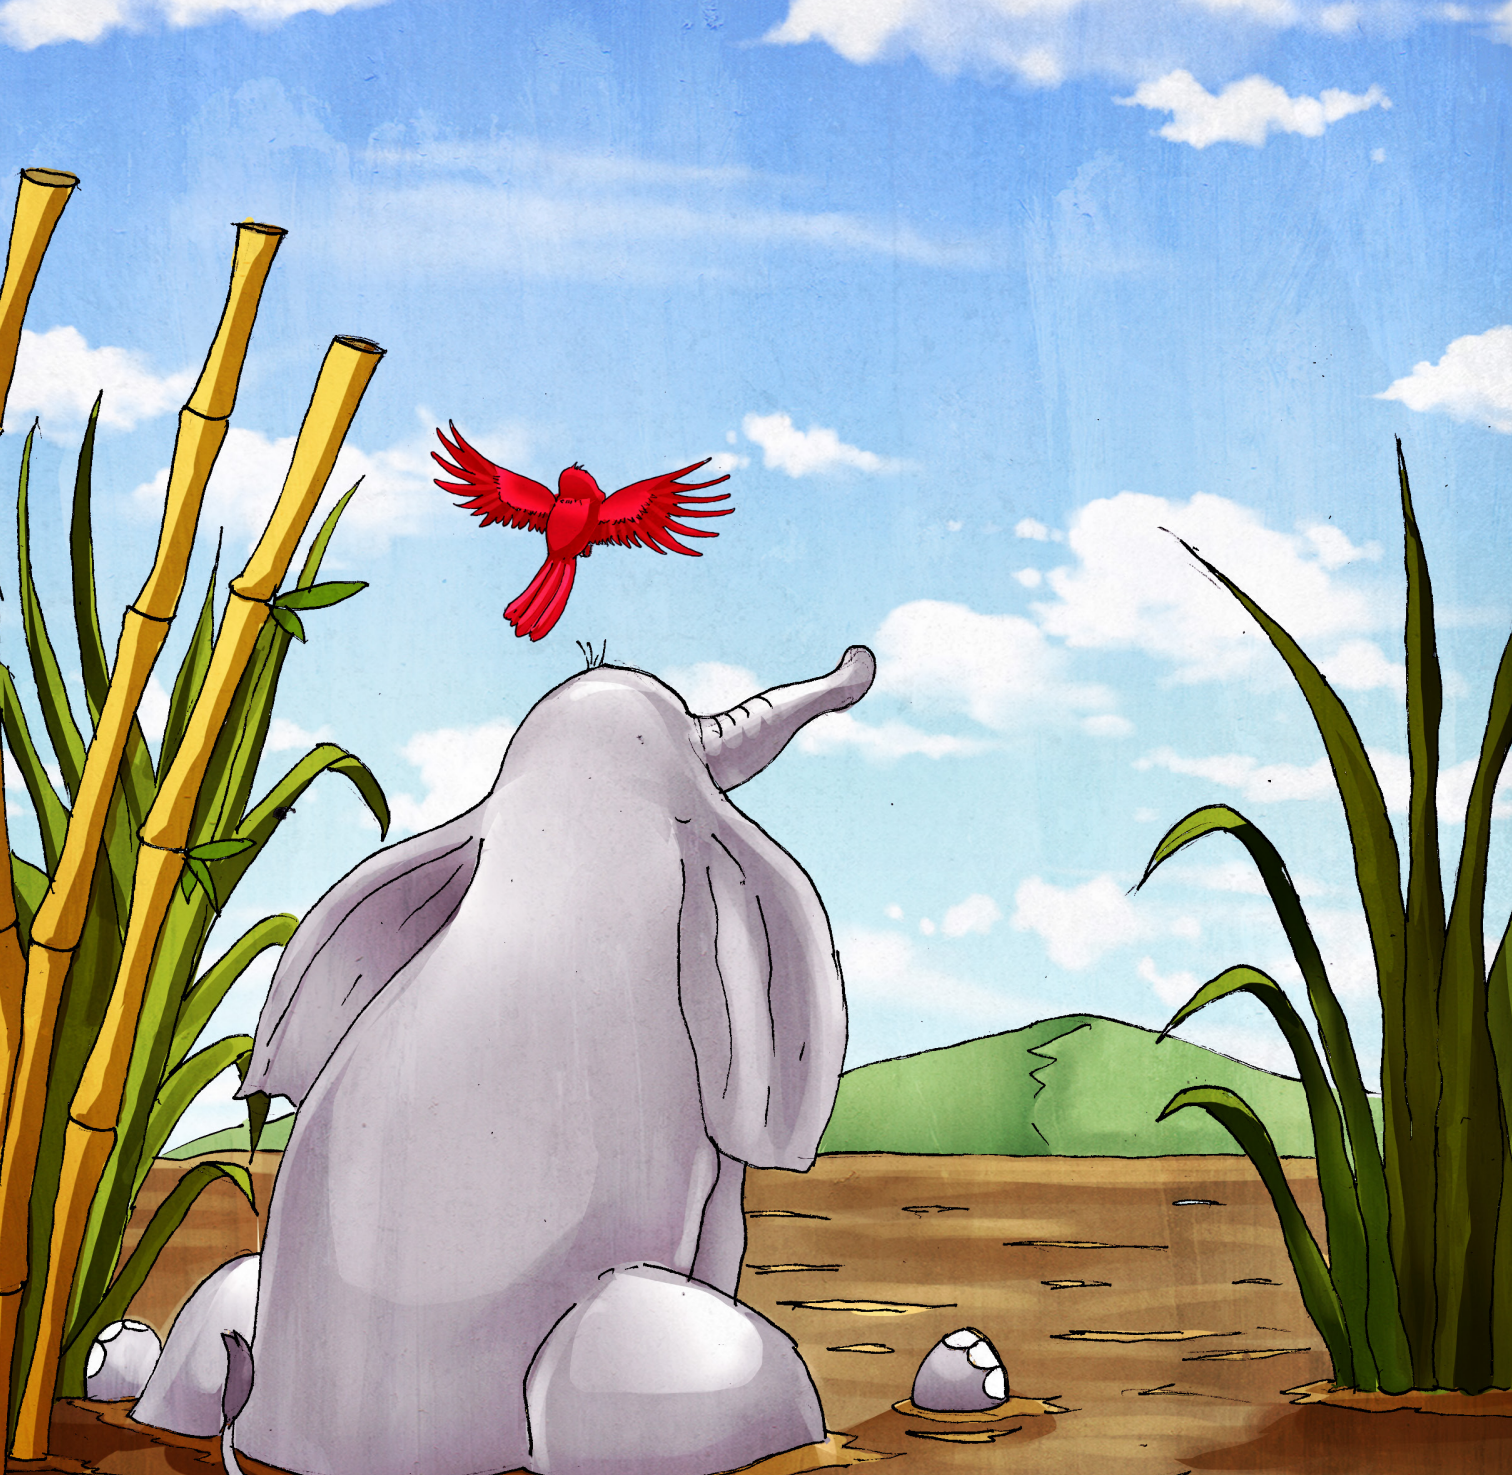

She asked, “What kind of a rock with legs?” and it answered, “I am called Nzovu and I want my Mom and Dad.”

“Why are you so big?” Gafundi asked, and Nzovu answered, “Even though I am big, I am still just a baby. I want my Mom and Dad.”

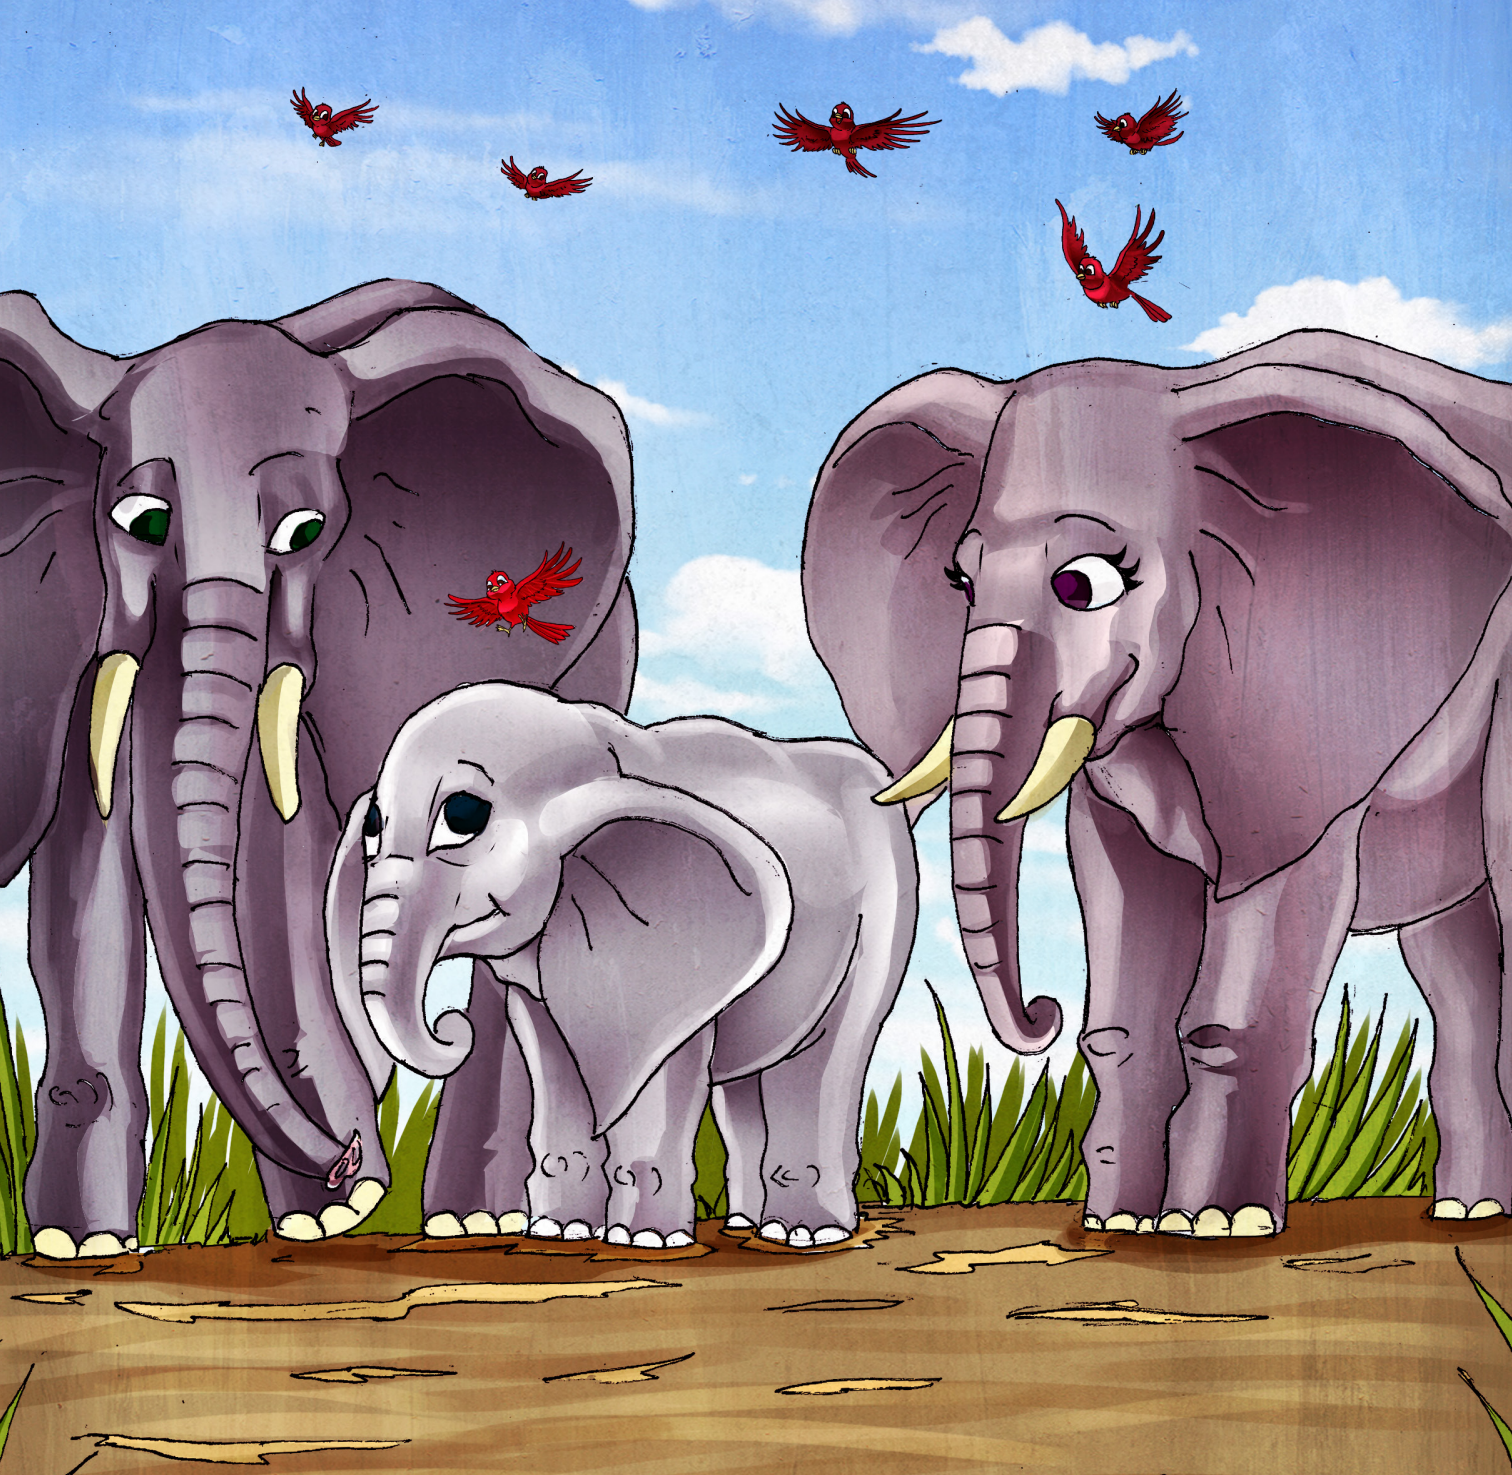

Nzovu started crying, every time she tried to get up, she would fail. It made Gafundi laugh, she thought it was funny seeing someone that big crying.

“Where do you live so that I can help you find your parents?” Gafundi asked and Nzovu replied, “Near the water.”

Gafundi called all her siblings, and they went to look for Nzovu's parents.

They brought them to her and they were all happy again. Since that day, Gafundi and Nzovu became good friends.
